

Rationale for repeatable courses

Repeatable classes afford students opportunities to:

- Connect theory and practice to develop new skills, deepen understandings of course content, and broaden perspectives on changing course topics
- Apply skills, abilities, theories or methodologies gained in one situation to new situations to solve problems creatively or explore issues
- Integrate and reflect on experiences and learning from multiple and diverse contexts, to internalize higher performance standards

Repeatable courses will be identified in the catalog with the following statement at the end of the course description: "Contents and expected learning proficiencies of this course vary from term to term. May be repeated up to ____ credits."
